Legislative Caucuses and Nominations.

James L. Husted, of Westchester, To Be the Speaker.

The struggle for the Speakership has at last inded—as I foretold in my despatch yesterday that I would—in a most decided victory for the "Bald gle of Westchester," James W. Husted. The ublican caucus met in the Assembly Chamber at f-past seven o'clock, and by the time it was called to order the galleries and lobbles and even with spectators, many of them being old nembers, who had come from distant parts of the ate during the past two days in order to in-

Harvey G. Eastman, of Poughkeepsie, then got

he floor to have his polished say about the greatess and goodness of his friend, Mr. Husted. From detailed description of the party services of Mr. aces members had to make in coming to Albany, and why it was, therefore, a necessity that a man up the session in 100 days.

"I come here," said be, "for $3 a day, when I might make $300 elsewhere;" and a voice called out om the lobbies, "You can make it here if you go he right way about it," This was too much for good nature, and, amid the laughter that greeted the

The motion was carried, and Mr. Husted at once went over to Mr. Prince and shook him warmly by the hand, and thus ended the strife of the republicans for the honors of the Speakership. As between the two candidates put in nomination a bad choice could not have been made, so the freends of both Mr. Prince and Mr. Husted can begin the session without any heartbreaking or fears as to the new Speaker becoming a failure before the adjournment.

It may be said, as a not very surprising fact, that Tom Alvord was not in the caucus during the contest for the Speakership. What is more, he was not invited; so if he stayed away of his own accord or not the result is all the same, He is to be considered an independent, and can swing round the circle of his various ambitions with a total disregard for the two political parties, while his knowledge of legislation and legislators may bring him no small amount of political capital before the close of the 100 days. His ambition, his friends have often remarked, was to be looked upon as an independent. He can now make the most of that ambition gratified.

REPUBLICAN SENATORIAL CAUCUS.

The republican Senators met in caucus in the Senate Chamber. Senator Cole, of Orleans, presided. Henry A Gidden, of Orleans, was nominated for Clerk; Hudson C. Mr. Wight, of Westchester, nominated General James W. Husted in appropriate terms, ainding to his service to the State, especially to the republican party.

Mr. Batcheller, in nominating L. Bradford Prince, said the duty leli apon him to do so for the reason that he had no colleague from his county, but he felt sure he would have many colleagues on this floor ere this session closes. He then proceeded to speak in high terms of the services of Mr. Prince as a memoer of this branch of the Legislature for a number of years, and especially as chairman of the Judiciary committee, it was chiefly through his energies that a corrupt Judiciary had been blotted out. He thought that with Mr. Prince in the chair we would be assured of honest and just begislation. He said the republican party need be on its guard at this time, and he believed that it would be for the beneft of ooth the State and the marty to put Mr. Prince in the chair.

Charles S. Spenber said he took great pleasure in seconding the nomination of James W. Husted, and then spoke of his qualifications for the position to which he had been nominated.

Mr. Brewer said it gave him great pleasure for ise here and give expression to the voice of the far western part of the State in seconding the nomination of L. Bradford Prince. He was arranded that the election of Mr. Prince would be a guarantee of honeit legislation here this winter. He said this without detracting in the least from the moreits of the other gentlemen named here.

Mr. Eastman, after sustaining the nomination of Mr. Husted, and thus as much of these qualities for Mr. Finsted.

Mr. Vedder said that, knowing both these gentlemen well, it was difficult for him to make a choice; but he had, since he came here, been convinced that Mr. Husted was the choice of the people and would go with them. He made a very handsome reference to the qualifications of Mr. Prince, and said he was ready to one the head, since he came here, been convinced that Mr. Husted was the choice of the people and would go with the nomination of Mr. Prince, referring to all services at some length.

Mr. Lincoln said it rarely fell to his lot to do a thing which gave him more pleasure than that of seconding the nomination of Mr. Husted. He then spoke of the prerequisites called for in a Speaker, and said that these were to be found largely in that gestleman. He, too, had taken part as a manager in the imprechment trials, and what was said of Mr. Prince in that direction was equally applicable to Mr. Husted. The fact was, he said, Mr. Husted was a born Speaker, and it would be to the interest of the House and of the State to elect him to that position.

Mr. Burrows sustained the nomination of Mr. Prince, when the cancus proceeded to vote, with this result:—Husted, 44; Prince 28. The announcement was received with great appliance and cheers.

The question of the sale of spirituous beverages in Boston is no longer a vexed or uncertain one. The faithful and immaculate officers of Pemberton square have at length solemnly and firmly resolved the right way about it." This was too much for good nature, and, amid the laughter that greeted the sally, Eastman sat down and joined heartily in the general hilarity.

Mr. Vedder was the next to speak in favor of Mr. Husted, but even his full blown remarks—a careful copy of which he had on the table being cor many present to make the caucus a soene of general finance in make the caucus a soene of general finance in make the caucus a soene of general finance in make the caucus a soene of general finance in make the caucus a soene of general finance in make the caucus a soene of general finance in make the caucus a soene of general finance in make the caucus a soene of general finance in make the caucus a soene of general finance in make the caucus a soene of general finance in the make the caucus a soene of general finance in the same of many present to make the caucus a soene of general finance in the same sets in the enforcement of her prohibitory liquor a taken was meant, certainly, and which cut his period short. Mr. Vedder was lo contemptible discrimination or impartiality in the rigid enforcement of that statute which provides iron doors and iron bars for the cruel flend who noted edinice and proceeded immediately to the barroom, in the basement of the hotel. It was at an hour when the prohibited liquids were being dispensed more generously than at any other time of day. Business men were there in numerous squads, imbibling the customary appetizer before dinner, and besides these there were present a score or more of virtuous temperance members of the Legislature, all of them more or less happy, and two or three of the most radical from the country were as positively "joily" as they were conspicuously ridiculous. The officers said not a word, but immediately "went for" the bar and its contents.

THE BARKEFERS

retreated and sent for General Parker, and the General, in turn, sent up for Fitzsimmons, his chief cierk, "Take an inventory of what they carry away, James," exclaimed Parker, excitedly. "Yes, sir," answered Fitzsimmons, and with pencil and card he recorned the seizure of about $150 worth of common beverages.

Information that a seizure at the Parker House was going on spread rapidly through the vicinity, and in a few moments.

A LARGE CROWD

collected in and around the hotel. Some of the spectators were very demonstrative in their movements and sarcastic in their remarks, and for a time serious consequences were imminent. No violence was offered, however, the assembled multitude being content with manifesting their feelings by groans and chaffing, all of which seriously disturbed the temper of the embarrassed and faltiful officials. That there was to be a clean sweep of the whole establishment was anticipated by Mr. Parker and everybody, and the noted landlord undoubtedly began to figure up how long it would take to make good the thousands which were to be taken froit him in a single moment. "Why," he said, "I have got over $50,000 worth of contraband goods in the wine room. I wonder it they will go down there?" An examination of the warrant showed that the authority of the officers was not limited in search, and the lidea that there was to be an example made of somebody ra patronage that very soon made up or the loss sustained by the seizure.

Simultaneously with the raid on Parker's another squad of officers cleaned out the establishments of Thomas Ingells and Mr. Foster, on Tremont street, opposite the Museum. About $1,000 worth of liquors and wines were taken from each place, and there were crowds and demonstrations attending the proceedings similar to those at the Parker House. As soon as the officers got away fresh supplies were ordered, and in half an hour business was was going on as usual.

CITY EXCITEMENT.

These events have created great excitement in the city, and the places visited by the officers are crowded this evening by parties who are discussing in a lively manner the issues of the day. The officers at headquarters intimate that this is only the beginning of a persistent and systematic effort to shut up all the notel and other tashlonable barrooms in the city. If they are sincere probably the places seized to-day will be cleaned out again to-morrow, and it is not unlikely that their visits may be extended to the Tremont, Young's, American, Revere and other leading hotels.

AMUSEMENTS.

When intellect is at a low ebb among writers for the stage it is natural that players should go a step further and have done with the troublesome thing altogether. Between the factuous vapidity of the present "emotional" school and the empty-headed, rolling-eyed jollity of the pantomining clown there is a wide difference. Unite the two in one dramatic body and you have something very like the matter performed at Nibio's last evening. It was such a performance as would make a philosopher matter performed at Nibio's hast evening. It was such a performance as would make a philosopher weep but which causes the average mortal to laugh till the sides ache. There were two pieces, but they were so much of a class that Leffingwell's old piece, "Romeo Jaffer Jenkins," might have been put on the bilis as a prologue to the Vokes' old piece, the "Bells of the Kitchen," without anybody being much the wiser. To portray romance and emotion, with the clown's vacuous grin for a satirical background, is the dramatic aim of both pieces—to cause everybody to laugh without the trouble of thinking about the process is the result. It may be the great hulking romantic loafer of the first piece idolizing his fattlida Jane Chummy, or it may be the boneless Vokes of the second apostrophizing a tinpot moon, it is all the same which—one is as idiotic as the other—both are Comedy with its head shaved and grinning through the bars of Bediam. A large andience fairly shricked its way through two hours and a half of this passion in hysteries, sobs in chackles, songs in shricks and dances in contortions. What it all amounted to no one could imagine at the close, and we should have cur doubts of the man who would undertake to analyze into the fields of rank nonsense, Leffingwell and Vokes' are at hand to show them the way. There is just a chance that the public would quickly be surfeited with so much nonsense all of the same kind, and we nope it will not last long.

Leffingwell, the Vokes, and W. B. Cahill were in good limb and tone last night.

New York," was presented to a sympathetic audiexists among the poorer classes. The character of notice. The cast is in many roles strong and there is a level merit in the representation which recomis a level merit in the representation which recommends it to a not very exacting audience. T. W. Keene fills acceptably the role of Badger. He is a little too generous, however, in the distribution of kicks, and we were in no wise surprised to see him appear in the second act with his boots worn out. This defect vulgarizes a rather forcible rendition of the rowdy adventurer. Miss Grainger's Lucy Fairweather is a quiet and effective piece of acting, which would do credit to a company of higher pretensions. The way in which "The Streets of New York" is put on the stage is very creditable to the management of the house, and the piece will, no doubt, draw good houses during the week, when it will be withdrawn. An olio performance between the acts gave evident delight to the audience, especially Mr. Davis' puppets.

"Little Sunshine" at Mrs. Conway's

At this theatre Miss Lillian Conway made her debut some time ago, and then gave promise of reaching excellence in her profession. Last even ing the young lady reappeared in a play called "Little Sunshine." The title is light enough, and very suggestive of lack of weight.

The drama is of the sensational order, and its characters are very old to both story readers and theatregoers. For its scenes, "Under the Gaslight," has been more extensively levied upon than light," has been more extensively levied upon than any other play. No novelist or playwright can claim a monopoly of the stolen child, the abandoned villians who abducted her, and who used her virtue has take shield of their iniquities, or of the berewed parent who traverses the earth in the search for his child and his and her enemies. Mr. Bartley Campbell, the author of "Little Sunshine," has iaid his claim to these, and why not? The character of Lillie Davis is no doubt meant by its present adaptor to be extremely lovable, but its innocence and freshness are made vehicles for such old and ineffective attacks on society's ways that very lew can help laughing at the natice damsel. In the part of Lillie's lover the author violates dramatic virtue. In this alone is he original, and when he makes Emmet take the money with which to work out his fortune he shows such good sense as the andlence must always applaud. Taken allogether the play of "Little Sunshine" is completely sensational, and, almost in all of its parts, absurd. Mrs. Conway ought to have care for the cultivation of her daughter's talent, but the selection of such a play for her is no evidence that she has.

Manning, will appear. The pieces selected are "The Happy Pair" and "The Little Treasure." The London Orchestra says of Sardou's new anti-republican piece, "Les Merveilleuses," that it is "a bright, dressy 'spectacle' of the 'Mme. Angot' period, with scanty drapery for the women and a good deal of bustle permeating it." The scene is laid in Paris in the time of the Directory. It is meant to satirize "shoddy" patriotism, and may possibly be in course of adaptation for America.

The new tenor, M. Devilliers, who has made his debut at the Italian Opera House in Paris as Alfredo, in Signor Verdi's "Traviata," is admitted on all hands to have a fine voice, but one which will require careful cultivation. As an actor, too, he has everything to learn; but what surprise can be felt at his defects? Two years since he was working as a cooper at Boulogne-sur-Mer, and was picked up by a professor of singing, Signor Rubini, who has instructed him in his scales and in the

HORR BLE MURDER.

A Boy Kills His Stepfather and Chops sequences of Youthful Depravity from Drink.

Last Sunday night, about eleven o'clock, the little village of Strambury was thrown into a terriole state of excitement over the report of a brutal murder which had just been committed in its midst, and which, on investigation, proved to be

An old citizen named Caleb Omans had been suddenly smitten down and murdered with an axe in the hands of his stepson, a lad of only a little over 15 years of age, named William Boorn. It over 15 years of age, named William Boorn. It seems that the boy wished to attend a dance in the evening, and he being under the inducate of liquor his stepfather thought he was not in a fit shape to trip the light fantastic toe, and accordingly told him he could not go; but he was bent op foing, and shaped his actions thusly. His stepfather then took hold of him and told him he would take him to bed. The boy did not think so, and struck him with his fistseveral times. Mr. George Coleman, a friend of the family, being present on a visit, heard the quarrel. He then went to some of the neighbors to fetch the woman folks home. On his return, in about 10 minutes after, a most horrible and Exevoting Sight met his gaze. Near the house he found the blood soaked corpse of Mr. Omans, his head nearly severed from the body, and cut and bruised about the shoulders and arms in a fearin manner. It seems that in Mr. Coleman's absence Omans told the boy to go to bed again. On his refusing to do so, he selzed the boy by the throat and put him out doors. As he went out young Boorn grasped an axe and struck his stepfather several times, inflicting wounds which probably killed him instantly. Boorn then went in the house, put on his coat and vest, took an axe, and went out and chopped him in the manner in which he was found. On Coleman's appearance Boorn threw his axe and fell backward, as though he had received serious injuries; but this was only jeigned, as it afterwards proved that there had not been any attempt on the part of the stepfather to injure his stepson.

OFFICERS

Immediately arrested Boorn, who evinced no sorrow for the terrible deed he had committed. On the contrary, he said he "was glad the old man was dead, and would like to have a channee to kill him again." The boy has always maintained a high standing in society, as being unusually steady and intelligent, until recently, when he has taken to drinking.

An inquestr

was beld this morning and a verdict of wilful and malicious murder was rendered. The body of the deceased will be buried to-morrow. Immense numbers of people are flocking to the scene of the horrible murder and all are greatly excited over the matter.

THE MURDER OF DANIEL LYNCH

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 5, 1874. A brutal murder was committed in Elizabeth orough on Saturday night. A large crowd, principally miners, gathered at the drinking house of Edward Maily. About ten o'clock a fight occurred and a young man named Daniel Lynch went in to watch the encounter. Patrick Slavin drew a rewatch the encounter, Patrick Slavin drew a revolver and fired at Lynch, the bail entering his head and lodging in his brain, causing death about six hours afterwards. Great excitement prevailed. The murderer was arrested by the borough constable, secompanied by a number of citizens, but was alterwards rescued by some of his friends. The arresting party was assailed with sticks and stones and several shots were fired. The constable was seriously injured and two or three citizens badly bruised. One of the assaulting party was also shot, but not seriously injured. Slavin is still at large.

CUBAN PATRIOTIC ASSOCIATION.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 5, 1874. The annual meeting of the Cuban Patriotic Association was held here to-day. M. A. Montejo was elected President. The annual report showed the membership to have largely increased and the re-ceipts to have been greater than in any former year; also that a large amount of Cuban bonds have been disposed of. Captain Simon Gratz, one of the Virginius prisoners, was present and was warmly welcomed. The President, after referring to the services of Captain Gratz, moved that a sum of money be placed in the latter's hands, which was carried unanimously.
